BOLIVIA CLAIMS STRONGER ARMY

MONTIVIDEZO, Uruguay, Dec. 17. Should Bolivia and Paraguay, who now appear to be tottering on the brink of warfare, actually come to grips, Bolivia would have the advantage of an army more than twice as strong as Paraguay's, it was estimated here today.

Bolivia's standing army consists of 7,500 men. There are 230,000 reservists upon which the nation can also draw.

Paraguay's standing army has a personnel of only 3,000. Its reserve lists total 100,000.

LONDON, Dec. 17.—The slight improvement in King George's condition, which began on Sunday was being maintained this afternoon, it was authoritatively stated at 3 o'clock by a Buckingham palace official.

At 10:45 a.m., the following bulletin was issued:

"The king had a fair night with some natural sleep towards morning. The slight improvement noted in his majesty's condition yesterday continues."

It was signed by Sir Stanley Hewett, Sir Hugh Rigby, and Lord Dawson, of Penn.

TWO AUTOMOBILES REPORTED STOLEN

Two automobiles were reported stolen in East Liverpool over the weekend, one of which was recovered near the Frank Swaney farm in Madison township yesterday.

The car recovered was owned by D. E. Dominick, 418 College street, which was taken while parked near the Y. M. C. A. Saturday night.

A Ford roadster owned by S. E. Wilkinson, of Waverly, W. Va., was stolen while parked in West Seventh street last night. The car carried West Virginia license Number 212-789.

ay street, who died in St. John's hospital, Pittsburgh, after a two-day illness of pneumonia, will be held at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning in the St. Ann's Catholic church, East End, in charge of the Rev. Father J. L. Maurer. Burial will be made in St. Aloysius cemetery.

You couldn't very well leave courage out of your list of words "that are magic."

Take courage out of a man and little is left.

It would be like taking the spinal column out of a vertebrate, the column that makes the difference between a man and a mollusk.

CHEERFULNESS, perhaps, is not quite so important. It makes the individual happier. But sometimes it is a sign that a man is too easily satisfied with himself.

On the banks of the Congo you could find a hundred natives cheerful to the limit, squabbling around a dead hippopotamus.

It is the best thing they can have. (Continued on page eight, Col. one)

A jury of six women and six men acquitted Edward C. Garside, 40, East Palestine mail carrier and automobile dealer, of manslaughter in the death of F. W. Ferguson, 58, New Waterford general storekeeper in an automobile crash on the Columbiana-New Waterford road May 26, at the conclusion of a four-day trial common pleas court, Lisbon, Saturday afternoon.

The jury took but two ballots, the first standing 11 to 1 for acquittal.

Garside was represented by Attorney R. H. Hahn, Youngstown; William B. Moore, Lisbon, and E. L. Lyon, East Palestine. Prosecuting Attorney R. M. Brookes and his assistant, John Baunkeach, appeared for the state.

Garside was charged with negligence in the operation of his automobile when it crashed into the sedan of Ferguson at the Frank Beck home near New Waterford. The Ferguson car took fire following the crash. Ferguson who was pinned under wreckage, was fatally burned.

WEAVER FUNERAL SERVICES TODAY

Detectives Called by Stark County in Investigation of Fearn and Heldman Tragedy.

Funeral services for William W. Weaver, superintendent of the C. C. Thompson pottery, were held this afternoon in his home in Vino street, in charge of the Rev. L. J. Davison, pastor of the First United Presbyterian church, who acted owing to the illness of the Rev. J. H. Lawther, pastor of the First Presbyterian church. Burial was made in Riverview cemetery.

Harter said he had been advised that a young woman, answering Mrs. Heldman's description, was seen in the interurban station at Akron at 6 o'clock and at 6:30 the night of Dec. 6, the night when Fearn was murdered.

CANTON, O., Dec. 17.—New information, indicating that the "phantom murderer" who killed Vernon Fearn was not Margaret Heldman, was afforded Prosecutor Harter this afternoon and may plunge the case into deeper mystery than ever.

Harter said he had been advised that a young woman, answering Mrs. Heldman's description, was seen in the interurban station at Akron at 6 o'clock and at 6:30 the night of Dec. 6, the night when Fearn was murdered.

CANTON, O., Dec. 17.—Ora Slater, of Cincinnati, Ohio's most famous detective, was to come here today to assist in clearing up the double tragedy which claimed the lives of Vernon Fearn and Margaret Heldman.

Several features of the case remain veiled in mystery, and Prosecutor Henry W. Harter, Jr., of Stark county, decided to engage Slater to investigate them.

Slater will be asked particularly to delve into circumstances leading up to the death of Mrs. Heldman, who it has now been definitely established, shot Fearn to death at the door of his home in the village of Waco on the night of Dec. 6.

Returning to her husband in Lorain, Mrs. Heldman remained there for a week while police were searching vainly for the "phantom gun girl." Then on Dec. 13, her husband, Wilbur O. Heldman, found a letter which she had written to him, confessing the murder. Fearn had been threatening to tell her husband of an incident in her life unless she submitted to him, according to the confession.

Heldman ordered his wife to come with him to Canton, in their automobile, and surrender herself. When they had almost reached the sheriff's office she shot herself, he said. She died in a hospital a short time later.

Heldman is under $25,000 bond as a coroner's witness to his wife's death.

TWO GIRLS DEAD NEAR BALTIMORE

BALTIMORE, Dec. 17.—The bodies of two 16-year-old girls, both with their skulls crushed in, were discovered in a field along the Annapolis boulevard today by police. They were identified as Marie Stolba and Thelma Black of Brooklyn, a suburban development of Baltimore.

Marie and Thelma left their homes last night for a store a mile distant and when they failed to return, police were notified and a search was started.

The two bodies were found in a thicket, carefully laid side by side with their coats under their heads. One girl had a broken ankle and both bodies were severely bruised.

Discovery of a quantity of broken glass on the road near the spot led police to believe they had been struck by an automobile, but an autopsy has been ordered to determine whether there was any assault.

ALLIANCE WOMAN TAKES POISON

ALLIANCE, O., Dec. 17.—Mrs. Catherine Nolan, 24, a cook in a restaurant here, and said to have formerly lived in Marietta, was reported in a critical condition at a hospital today as a result of swallowing poison, police said.

Her chances of recovery are slight, hospital attaches said today.

PRAY HARD AND SEND FOR BEST
DOCTOR—SUNDAY'S REMEDY FOR ILLS

Billy Sunday confided to his hearers Sunday morning his remedy for illness of any sort. "I always pray as hard as I can and send for the best doctor," he said. "I believe they work together."

He then declared he was told by John D. Rockefeller to use oxygen. "I always carry a tank with me," the oil man told him. So he rushed an order to New York and by yesterday morning he had a supply for himself.

"And any way I began to get better Friday night when the meeting was on in the tabernacle. When the folks came up they told me you had been praying for me."

that more than 1,000 persons "for the lastest trial" during the series of services.

Nearly 11,000 persons heard the evangelist deliver three messages—two in afternoon and evening yesterday, and last in the eyes of Mr. Sunday's hearers last night.

Before leaving the city, the 65-year-old revival chief said that he proposes to head a pilgrimage to the Holy Land in March, 1930. Probably 600 or 700 friends, mostly converts, are expected to accompany him.

The evangelist spoke at noon and gave a second sermon tonight in a one day church in Pittsburgh, of which the Rev. Clarence E. Macarthur is pastor. From Pittsburgh he will go to Newark, N. J., for a conference tomorrow, thence proceed to Winoona Lake, Ind., to spend the Christmas season and rest before opening a three-day revival in the city mission in Akron, O., on Thursday, Jan. 3. From Akron he will go to Elyria, where, on Sunday, Jan. 6, he will launch a six-week evangelistic campaign.

HOMER RODEHEAVER SAYS REVIEW
PLANTS REVIVAL SEED IN HONOLULU

Publicity given the Billy Sunday campaign by the East Liverpool Review is expected to bring about a revival in Honolulu, Homer Rodeheaver, soloist and choir leader of the evangelistic party, announced at the close of the six week services in the Second and Washington streets' tabernacle last night.

Voicing the thanks of the evangelist to The Review, Rodeheaver said:

"You have been given such capital reports of this revival that much of the success of the campaign has been due to the preaching that has been done by means of the printed word, the scope of which can by no means be estimated. But just this evening I received word from a soldier stationed in Honolulu who said he and others there have been reading regularly of this meeting and have become so interested in it that they are about to start a meeting of their own. So here is a very significant and unforeseen outcome of the meetings here. The paper sent this man has been passed around until it has had this effect. You can never tell where the effect of a revival ends."

Lauds Prof. Laughlin.

On behalf of Mr. Laughlin, Rodeheaver also expressed the thanks of the party for all of the things done which contributed to the aid of the campaign in every way. He was particularly appreciative of the training of the choir by Prof. Hugh Laughlin of the city schools. "He is the only man ever to have been twice chairman of the music committee in our campaigns," he said. "Your choir here stands out and I know much of the credit therefore is due the training of the choir by Prof. Hugh Laughlin."

Later Mr. Laughlin expressed the appreciation of the choir for the services of Mr. Rodeheaver. He was roundly cheered. In addition, upon the motion of the Rev. R. N. Ball, pastor of the Anderson Methodist Episcopal church, the entire audience gave him a vote of thanks.

Praises Salvation Army.

Then Rodeheaver spoke of Chief Usher W. T. McNutt. "He, too, has rendered fine service." He said

... and here is Model 42

ALL the advantages of Atwater Kent manufacturing that have attracted 2,000,000 owners—the fine tone, the great power, the dependability and low price—are here in the Model 42. It is light socket operated, at a cost of less than a cent an hour. And because house current varies in some localities an automatic line voltage control is built in to assure even power and even reception always, and to protect the A. C. tubes against the effects of excess voltage.

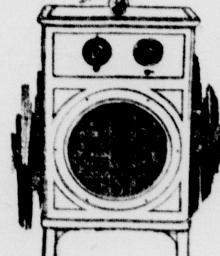

"Here is a fine set," said the engineers.

"Build us a fine cabinet for it." So a new cabinet was designed. They gave it panelled corners and ball feet to emphasize its grace of line. They gently curved the old gold top to set off the modernistic gold-plated nameplate. They made a FULL-VISION Dial with over-size numbers to make station-selecting even quicker and easier. And here is Model 42—tested, finished, and guaranteed.

POLICE FUND AID TO NEEDY

Dance Planned Saturday to Replenish Treasury.

Wellsville police today announced plans for their annual Christmas benefit dance to be held Saturday night in the city hall auditorium.

While labeled a "police benefit" affair, the beneficiaries, Mayor Wallace L. Fogo said today, were not the police themselves but others with whom the department comes in contact at various times.

For instance, the department owes a bill of $60 to the Alliance hospital and another bill to the East Liverpool hospital.

In the first case, police authorities sent a local man, who was "broke," and had no relatives to the Alliance institution for help. He was suffering from cataract of the eyes, and his sight was virtually gone. County commissioners paid for an operation.

The city stood good for the hospital bill. The man, the mayor said today, can see again.

Another man fell off a building here and sustained injuries to his back. He had no funds nor means of getting any. The city again pledged financial aid and this bill must be paid the East Liverpool City hospital.

That's why police are holding their dance Friday night. Arrangements are being made to procure a good orchestra.

STUDENTS PLAN YULE PROGRAM

Rehearse for Exercises Friday Afternoon.

Rehearsal of songs, recitations and exercises occupied the attention of school students today as they prepared for "program day" Friday, marking the close of schools for the Christmas holidays.

Students will get a two week vacation, classes being scheduled to reconvene Jan. 7.

Yule programs will be given in the primaries, departments and high school Friday afternoon, beginning at 2 o'clock.

Under auspices of the student council of the high school, a large Christmas tree will be erected in the corridor of the building. Around this students will group to sing Christmas carols during the opening periods of the morning.

Local Unit Will Install Officers at Dinner.

Installation of new officers, gift exchange and a program in keeping with the spirit of the season will feature the annual Christmas party of the Wellsville Kiwanis club which will be held tomorrow night at 6:30 o'clock in the dining room of the First Presbyterian church.

Dinner will be followed by the program.

Bernard S. Purinton will succeed L. G. Aughlinbaugh as president of the club. The other officers are: Vice president, the Rev. H. F. Post, trustee, W. R. MacDonald; treasurer, R. W. Smith.

The board of directors includes Fred Dando, G. W. Millan, Charles Platt, the Rev. W. C. Latta, Arnold McCombs, M. R. Shindler and J. B. Bluest.

At a recent meeting of the board, S. E. Daw was re-named secretary, a position he has held for four years.

Arrangements are being made for approximately 100 club members, their families and guests.

Special music will be provided by three local boys, Frank Nyiro, John Campbell and Paul Katz. Club members in unison will sing carols. Gifts will be exchanged.

LEAVES AUTO FOR $100 FINE

Mike Fusco, Salineville, Arrested on Liquor Charge.

Arrest of Michael Fusco, Salineville, charged with transporting intoxicating liquor, topped the activities of police here over the weekend.

Fusco was fined $100 and costs at a hearing before Mayor Wallace L. Fogo. He left his car, a Pontiac coupe, in police custody as a guarantee of payment.

Fusco was arrested by Chief Fultz and Patrolman Hanlon in Commerce street between Fifth and Sixth Saturday night. He had a quantity of wine, police said.

B. R. Petty, Jack Riddle, John Carnes and Harvey Sheekler were arrested for disorderly conduct. Petty paid a $10 fine and was released. Sheekler will be taken to Lisbon. Carnes is in jail awaiting a hearing. Riddle paid $5 and was freed.

HASKIN DAILY LETTER

By Frederick J. Haskin

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 17.—The right of a woman to change her mind has come to be regarded as an inalienable one; it has passed into a proverb. The female inclination of this sort appears to have extended to legislation governing hours of labor in industry. A comparatively short time ago there was much agitation for laws to prohibit the employment of women in certain capacities in the industries and especially to limit their hours of labor. Much attention was directed to the stopping of night work. The result was that many state legislatures enacted measures of a regulatory nature.

The theory on which these measures were passed was that employers were requiring women to undertake tasks beyond their strength, tasks for which they were unfit and were requiring women to work at night. Certainly, the principal motive of the legislation was to protect women workers.

Whether it arises from a few years of the ultra-modern age or some other cause, women are taking an entirely different view of this protective legislation. Today, instead of looking upon it as a shield, they appear to be regarding it as an encumbrance. From a protection against harsh employers it has become in the view of women an undesirable bar to opportunity.

"It is a difficult thing to measure" says a recent utterance from the woman's division of the department of labor, "what the prohibitory laws may have done to women's opportunities in the states where they are in effect. From the fact that women are successfully employed elsewhere in many of the prohibited occupations, it appears that the prohibition must be something of a restriction where it exists."

So the shielding laws assume a new aspect and become another instance of discrimination against women workers. It seems quite likely that women will undertake to lobby as hard for the repeal or modification of some of these laws as they lobbied in the first instance to get them passed.

Interest in the child health of the community should prompt a generous response. Health education to keep children well and nutrition, health camps and fresh air schools to make them well are included in the Christmas seal program.

And, too, funds obtained through the sale of the seal of health that is sailing on the 1928 seal, which will appear only during the holiday season, but the whole year around will carry a cargo of health to children, will be used in East Liverpool to provide sanatoria treatment for sufferers from the white plague as well as to pay part of the salary of the public health nurse.

Build up the health of the community's children by buying Christmas seals.

Buy Health Seals

With but one week of the annual campaign remaining, East Liverpool today was approximately $500 short of the $2,250 quota, or 10 cents per capita, in the Christmas seal sale, according to reports compiled by Mrs. Louis T. Steinfeld, chairman of the health committee of the City Federation of Women's clubs.

Booths were closed in business houses Saturday night, but campaigners will be on duty in the lobbies of the downtown postoffice and Y. M. C. A. until Yuletide eve in the effort to keep the Ceramic City on the honor roll of Ohio Public Health association communities.

The seal committee today renewed its appeal for support of the movement to stamp out tuberculosis, citing the fact that 85 per cent of funds obtained in the campaign will be retained for home service in the event that the goal is reached.

Movie Angers II Duce

Premier Mussolini has summarily dismissed the entire Italian board of censorship for passing the American film, "The Street Angel," the action of the premier following a gala showing of the picture in Rome to which the entire audience had been invited as guests of the management. In the opinion of one "outraged critic," it was due solely to the fact that the audience was so made up that the theater was saved from being "luminated under a Niagara of violent indignation." Even so, expressions of the disapproval of the audience were frequent and long-continued.

"Perhaps in the remote past conditions approached those shown in the picture," is the comment of another critic, published in the Impero, "but in Mussolini's Italy certainly nothing of that nature exists. Gypsies, underworld characters, prostitution, cheating, misery, vice, over-dressed peasants, gamin life, people in rags, filthiness, superstition, thuggery, human landscapes immersed in endless fog—even the classic sun of Italy was obliterated. * * * Can you imagine an Italian seascape perpetually steeped in fog?"

This last objection of all those set out is probably the one which was paramount in evoking Italian displeasure. They are proud of their sunshine, as well they may be, for their land is justly called "Sunny Italy." And it is something of an outrage to lay the scene of the story in Naples and throughout the film blanket her wonderful harbor, perhaps the most beautiful bay in the world, in fog. Certainly the film is not a good advertisement for Italy, which specializes in selling her sunshine to the prospective traveler.

National Shrine

The design accepted by Secretary of War Davis for the completion of the tomb of the "Unknown Soldier" in Arlington cemetery—the joint work of Thomas Hudson Jones, sculptor, and Lorimer Rich, architect, both of New York—is alike simple and dignified.

Reproductions of the design show it to be a sarcophagus, twelve feet long, six feet wide and ten feet high, which is to be superimposed upon the existing base. The sculptured relief in front shows a figure of Victory, with supporting figures on either side, one representing Peace, and the other Man-Power of the Nation. Doric pilasters strengthen the corners and sides, and there is a wreath in each of the three panels in which the sides are divided, while the inscription is to go on the back.

The plans call for a flight of granite steps approximately 120 feet wide extending down from the front of the tomb to a level 20 feet below the base. A broad, tree-lined avenue extends several hundred feet eastward toward the Potomac, terminating in a balustraded platform overlooking the city of Washington.

The choice was made in a final competition in which five models had been selected, and was recommended unanimously by a special jury of award, the Arlington National Cemetery commission and the Fine Arts commission after a competition in which three sculptors and architects participated.

What in the completed monument will appeal most to the lay visitor to Arlington, judging by the reproductions which have appeared in print, is the manner in which it fits in with its solemn surroundings, making a shrine in all ways worthy of the nation which thus makes visible record of its esteem for its honored dead.

Earth Overweight

Mother Earth is decidedly overweight. No less an authority than Dr. Paul R. Heyl of the United States Bureau of Standards at Washington has gravely announced that there has been a gain of some $2,000,000,000,000 tons—to be exact.

No, this doesn't mean that we have picked up a few stray moons, some planetoids, comets or "shooting stars," and are taking them along as excess baggage. It means that we have perfected our scales and have found that we have made this trifling mistake—that these extra tons must be added to that obtained by our previous calculation—a figure expressed by a six and 21 ciphers.

There is no need for excitement; Mother Earth will have no need to let out her equatorial apron strings. She will have no ungraceful curves to reduce to attractive dimensions. No husky massaeurs or fat-reducing agencies need expect an increase in business.

Come on, Mr. Scientist, there is still room for improvement in those last 18 ciphers, and a decimal on the end would look more convincing.

Beauty, Utility Possible in Modern Wiring; Consult With Sayres Co., On Your Next Job

Whether your home is a spacious mansion or a simple, cozy cottage, the judicious use of electrical equipment and appliances can enhance its beauty and increase its utility, according to the Sayre Electric company, which specializes in this type of work. The Sayre company is one of the oldest electrical firms in this district and, through years of experience during which many problems in wiring have been successfully solved, it is in position to well advise their patrons in questions of wiring and equipment.

For instance, consider the dining room of your home. The dining room is a place where distinction in entertainment is a matter of pride and where comfort is a daily requirement. Housekeepers have learned to obtain these, in large part, by means of electrical appliances, and they appreciate the complete wiring that makes these appliances so easy to use.

There should be in this room three baseboard convenience outlets, one of which is located with particular reference to the service table for the convenient use of a heating plate or vacuum cleaner and for a portable heater. In addition, two convenience outlets should be placed at the most convenient point four and one-half feet from the floor for bullet cooking appliances or electric candlesticks.

The floor outlet, in itself a small matter to install, is one of those little refinements of wiring that set the mark of distinction on the whole room.

Electric percolators and chafing dishes and toasters are coming into ordinary use more and more. Their beauty is blushed and their convenience lessened when cords are carried overhead and the otherwise slightly room is sadly disfigured. There should be a floor outlet to serve them.

All this is equally true of other appliances that are often needed in the dining room. An electric fan adds everything to the comfort of a dining room in hot weather, but a long cord stretching to a lighting outlet and perverting its function, is as objectionable as any that might be carried to the ceiling fixture. Almost every family owns one or more appliances and no house is completely wired that does not provide for their convenient use. The convenience outlet under the table is especially wired to take care of them. The cord may be carried through an cyclot in the rug to the appliances.

Nowhere else in the house has the lighting scheme so decorative a value as in the dining room. Here the finest taste may be exercised to give full effect to beautiful side fixtures and to the ceiling light.

The illumination should be controlled very much as in the living room. As one enters from the hallway he should be able to throw on the center light by tipping one of two tumbler switches. The other switch throws on the side lights as in the living room. These lights are so distributed as to emphasize the architectural beauties of the room. The control of the ceiling fixture is a three-way switch, which enables one to throw the center light on or off at the kitchen door as well as at the hall entrance.

The dining room is completely wired with three tumbler switches, six convenience outlets, five wall outlets and one ceiling outlet.

Racing for port, slim nose in the smother while the rival merchantmen hove to and rode out the storm—flashing down the Roaring Forties to make one glamorous record after another on the stubborn trip around the Horn . . . what made the "Flying Cloud" the darling of the nation in the good old clipper days? — Craftsmanship! . . . Every inch of her tuned to its purpose. Every quality so balanced as to make a perfect whole. The last inch of canvas—that could be safely carried. The final foot of cargo space—that didn't cut down speed. No wonder—like to like—she gathered to herself the cleverest Master and the staunchest Mate who owed allegiance to the Stars and Stripes.

Today, our field of action shifts to landward. Our cars crowd roads around the world as once our clippers filled the glittering lanes at sea. But balanced craftsmanship still turns the trick—so much of this, so much of that, no more—and so the Reo Flying Cloud sails on. — Speed—much more than you'll ever need. Quick pick-up and such 4-wheel brakes as bring her up all-standing. A wheel that answers to a finger's touch. Dependability that hugs the road no matter how you let her out. A power that rides the hills as once the elder "Flying Cloud" rode equinoctial gales. More space—an extra-wide rear seat, a front seat with those unexpected inches that make an added passenger a pleasure, not a temper test. Beauty, of course—a sleekness and a grace inseparable from perfect balance of design. — From this day forward—here's the cheering news—there's not a single Flying Cloud—but two. The Master is the bigger car. The Mate is next in line. Every quality that distinguishes the first goes also for the second—except size . . . and price . . . REO MOTOR CAR CO. • LANSING, MICHIGAN.

so it's well for them to be cheerful about it.

But men of ambition must not be come cheerful so easily.

As a substitute for cheerfulness we suggest earnestness.

MAKE up your own list of nine words, use as many of this list as you like, but better still, find substitutes. It will be good practice for the mind.

It is a good thing to set things down clearly, to formulate ideas as to what is worth while in life.

That is almost as important as the chart that the captain uses in crossing the ocean.

Life is an ocean, you have to start from one shore, which is the cradle, and go ahead until you reach the farther shore, which is the grave. Those are fortunate that find ways to make the journey pleasantly.

There is one word left out of Mr. Young's list, justice. It is far more important than all the others put together, and it includes most of the others.

GET your children into the country, get a little place in the far country or suburbs, let your children have fresh air, sunshine, exercise, freedom. The city is not a place in which to bring up children.

One of the best things ever written about children is: "God may forgive you for not giving food that costs money. He will not forgive you for depriving them of sunshine and fresh air that costs nothing."

THE editor of the London Sphere intelligently celebrated Armistice day by reminding thoughtful Britons of what might have happened during the war, and of what would surely happen, if destructive airplanes should be let loose on England hereafter.

Cities would be literally wiped out, the dead in great cities counted in millions, financial damage absolutely irreparable, the property and civilization created through the work of centuries destroyed in a few hours.

Silkworms that usually produce at this time of the year in Brazil have been taken to Bulgaria, where silkworms mature in the summer, in an experiment in producing two crops of silk a year.

Sunday Gets $6,321

Scores Clog Way to Platform. The former baseball player, fighting a mild attack of influenza which prevented his appearance in the pulpit Friday and also Saturday afternoon, closed the revival with words of benediction, following strains of "God Be With You Till We Meet Again" which the choir and jammed congregation sang in unison with tense feeling.

Tellingly he had preached on the theme "And He Said Tomorrow."

Then those essaying to begin a new life in the domain of religion surged through and clogged the trials and aisles leading to the platform where the evangelist, clothed in Homer Rodeheaver's overcoat, waited to receive them.

Twice before during the day the convalescent leader of the campaign spoke, in the afternoon and morning. He had planned to speak to men only, also in the interim between noon and evening, but his hearers voted enthusiastically for him to husband his strength so that he could with greater ease face them in the usual, two services.

On Saturday night he also left his room in the Travelers' hotel to speak despite his illness of the preceding day. Though plainly a bit husky of voice and noticeably tired and weaker than when in his usual form he delivered his message with the same effectiveness that is characteristic of him. In all of these meetings persons accepted his invitation to begin the Christian life.

Enthusiasm that was deep and general greeted his return on Saturday night and increased with each successive hour on Sunday.

Expresses Thanks for Generosity.

The free will offering which is always given him on the concluding day of his campaigns, he having but five pay days a year, was presented at the night service by the Rev. L. J. Davidson, pastor of the First United Presbyterian church and the chairman of the campaign executive committee.

"I shall have to get to heaven to find words to appropriately thank you for your kindness and generosity," replied Mr. Sunday. "The saddest word in the English language is 'Farewell.' It since our lips now. You will always be much in my prayers and we will remember East Liverpool with pleasure. I hope that we shall all so live as to meet in a higher realm though we may not do so here again."

"Then he pronounced the benediction. And the choir, directed for the final time by the faithful Rodeheaver broke into the comforting refrain of "God Be With You Till We Meet Again."

Bounding over the press section Mr. Sunday wormed his way into the quarters of Custodian Willis Locke in the southeast section of the auditorium and discarded his dripping under-clothing. Appearing once again he passed under the choir, crossing the platform to the north section to board his automobile for the hotel. He momentarily stopped, waved at the singers, and for the second time in two decades quitted an East Liverpool plot of ground which to generations yet unborn will be pointed out as the place where America's most famous evangelist in his day preached for three months, a departure which only the William Penn hotel while there, Louis Zellers, at Calcutta.

Though the congregation was not formally allied in the campaign members of the Nazarene church of St. Clair avenue sent a contribution to the good will offering for Mr. Sunday during the day.

Books Meetings in Texas.

Mr. and Mrs. Sunday were driven to Pittsburgh this morning by "Bill" Curry, as Mr. Sunday dubs him, the son of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Curry.

The latter also accompanied them.

They are to be guests of a friend in the William Penn hotel while there, the William Penn hotel while there, Louis Zellers, at Calcutta.

Though the congregation was not formally allied in the campaign members of the Nazarene church of St. Clair avenue sent a contribution to the good will offering for Mr. Sunday during the day.

Sing Old Songs.

The singing of the final days of the campaign stood out. Because of the indisposition of Mr. Sunday, Rodeheaver exerted himself in making up for the lack of the presence of the evangelist by additional work on the part of himself and choir.

Old songs, dear to many from far and near, were sung yesterday Rodeheaver was besieged with suggestions for special songs all day and in the degree that he could accede to the requests made. "Love Divine," "Sail On," and "Church By the Side of the Road," were given with a vim at the outset of last night's service. Then one of the late Will Thompson's hymns was sung by him with the choir aiding with verses of "Jesus Lover of My Soul," in conjunction.

"You will never build a better monument than Mr. Thompson has done by his songs for this city," he observed.

Then followed "How Firm a Foundation," "Brighten the Corner Where You Are." The men sang "Hide Me in the Pavilion" and he, himself, "God's Tomorrow." "Let the Lower Light Be Burning," was given with singers along the sides and in the rear responding to lines in turn. "You do sing well," commented Rodeheaver in the midst of it all, "and I think it is due to Prof. Hugh Laughlin." Then he himself sang to those who had strayed away from the fold, "Have You Counted the Cost By Not Coming Back."

Rev. Dr. Hawkins Thanks Pastor.

All of the co-operating pastors were brought to the platform for the final prayer for the converts by Rodeheaver.

It was made by the Rev. Dr. Warren O. Hawkins, pastor of the First Methodist church. He invoked that the church help to shepherd these lambs.

Before his prayer the Rev. Dr. Hawkins expressed the appreciation of the East Liverpool Ministerial association in the campaign just concluded and of Billy Sunday. "It was my privilege to make the address of welcome at the outset of this revival," he said. "And I would now at this close attest to the magnificent power of grace attending these services. God has been with us. Some criticism outside of the tabernacle has been made of things allegedly said within it, which to my personal knowledge was not mentioned. I have been here at practically all night meetings and missin but few afternoons one."

"Mr. Sunday has the hearty approval of every member within the Ministerial association. His services here have been of a high order. He has preached the gospel as it rarely is preached these days. God is using him in an unusual way."

"He has been at times anxious as to the expenses of this campaign but I have been struck by his marked indifference to that pertaining to the offering to be given him."

He came out to preach today and last night at the risk of his life. He has not spared himself at any time. And we would have him know that we as ministers appreciate fully his work among us."

Mr. Sunday called the attention of the big audience to the fact that the revival had been attended by unusually fine weather. "We have had but one storm and but one bad rain in the whole time that we have been here. You will not soon again get such weather as that," he remarked. And yet some think that the Lord is not in these campaigns." His announcement of the fact drew applause.

Urge Interest in Prayer Meetings.

In the midst of his singing Rodeheaver would suggest that all churchmen get more intensely into the work of their various congregations from this on. "And do not forget the prayer meetings," he warned.

With Mrs. Louise Brookman Taylor he sang "The Old Rugged Cross" and "No Disappointment in Heaven."

while not far from it the first executive of the land, George Washington, once camped.

But a stone's throw away from it lies the railway bed over which the great emancipator Abraham Lincoln passed to his inauguration, while on the same roadway, two decades later, the martyred President Garfield was carried to his final resting place in Cleveland. And, too, it was long a part of territory represented in congress by another president, the lamented William McKinley, to which must be linked the further fact that many of the co-operating churches of the campaign were located across the Ohio river in a section once ably represented in the national house of representatives by John W. Davis, Democratic nominee for president in 1924.

During the campaign approximately 170,000 persons heard Mr. Sunday. The offering given him and the expenses incident to the series of meetings totalled $16,000. Of this latter sum by reason of the constant large attendance from points out-of-town, the average cost to each one attending would be less than 10 cents. All present did not pay, yet all were benevolently if for no other reason than being in a wholesome atmosphere.

Mr. and Mrs. Sunday were the only members of the party remaining in the city over night.

Rodeheaver Goes to Dayton.

Rodeheaver and his secretary and pianist, Paul Beckwith, went to Steubenville where they boarded a train for Dayton, where, tonight, in the First United Brethren church, one of the largest in the city, they will give a concert.

Miss Florence Kinney, Bible teacher and pianist, went to Springfield where she expected to arrive in time for breakfast in her home.

Beckwith will go from Dayton to Detroit to meet his parents, and with them will go to their home in Durand, Michigan.

Albert Peterson, driving through the night in Rodeheaver's automobile headed for Elyria where this morning at 9 o'clock he held a conference with the ministerial association in charge of the revival to begin there on January 6. There he planned to store the automobile until the reunion of the evangelistic party. Heading westward later in the day, he planned to go to Chicago before proceeding to his home in Ottumwa, Ia., for the holidays.

Willis Locke, the building custodian, gathered up the fragments of the party's belongings at the tabernacle and then, catching the last car for Steubenville, started for Madisenville, Ky., where he will visit for a few days before proceeding to St. Louis, Mo., for another brief stop ere he joins his family also in Ottumwa.

With the end of the holidays he and Peterson will go to Elyria where the tabernacle will have already been erected. By the time cold weather sets in, Locke, known to thousands hereabouts by now, will be sleeping naturally as is his wont under timber that carries constantly the smell of pine.

Books Meetings in Texas.

Mr. and Mrs. Sunday were driven to Pittsburgh this morning by "Bill" Curry, as Mr. Sunday dubs him, the son of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Curry.

The latter also accompanied them. They are to be guests of a friend in the place where America's most famous evangelist in his day preached for three months, a departure which only the William Penn hotel while there, the William Penn hotel while there, Louis Zellers, at Calcutta.

Though the congregation was not formally allied in the campaign members of the Nazarene church of St. Clair avenue sent a contribution to the good will offering for Mr. Sunday during the day.

Sing Old Songs.

The singing of the final days of the campaign stood out. Because of the indisposition of Mr. Sunday, Rodeheaver exerted himself in making up for the lack of the presence of the evangelist by additional work on the part of himself and choir.

Old songs, dear to many from far and near, were sung yesterday Rodeheaver was besieged with suggestions for special songs all day and in the degree that he could accede to the requests made. "Love Divine," "Sail On," and "Church By the Side of the Road," were given with a vim at the outset of last night's service. Then one of the late Will Thompson's hymns was sung by him with the choir aiding with verses of "Jesus Lover of My Soul," in conjunction.

"You will never build a better monument than Mr. Thompson has done by his songs for this city," he observed.

Then followed "How Firm a Foundation," "Brighten the Corner Where You Are." The men sang "Hide Me in the Pavilion" and he, himself, "God's Tomorrow." "Let the Lower Light Be Burning," was given with singers along the sides and in the rear responding to lines in turn. "You do sing well," commented Rodeheaver in the midst of it all, "and I think it is due to Prof. Hugh Laughlin."

Then he himself sang to those who had strayed away from the fold, "Have You Counted the Cost By Not Coming Back."

Rev. Dr. Hawkins Thanks Pastor.

All of the co-operating pastors were brought to the platform for the final prayer for the converts by Rodeheaver.

It was made by the Rev. Dr. Warren O. Hawkins, pastor of the First Methodist church. He invoked that the church help to shepherd these lambs.

Before his prayer the Rev. Dr. Hawkins expressed the appreciation of the East Liverpool Ministerial association in the campaign just concluded and of Billy Sunday. "It was my privilege to make the address of welcome at the outset of this revival," he said. "And I would now at this close attest to the magnificent power of grace attending these services. God has been with us. Some criticism outside of the tabernacle has been made of things allegedly said within it, which to my personal knowledge was not mentioned. I have been here at practically all night meetings and missin but few afternoons one."

"Mr. Sunday has the hearty approval of every member within the Ministerial association. His services here have been of a high order. He has preached the gospel as it rarely is preached these days. God is using him in an unusual way."

"He has been at times anxious as to the expenses of this campaign but I have been struck by his marked indifference to that pertaining to the offering to be given him."

With Mrs. Louise Brookman Taylor he sang "The Old Rugged Cross" and "No Disappointment in Heaven."

While not far from it the first executive of the land, George Washington, once camped.

On next Wednesday night, Homer Rodeheaver probably will be upon the air from WLS, Chicago, as he was last Monday night.

He will be in Buffalo, N. Y., on Sunday afternoon when, under the auspices of the Federated churches, 133 in number, he will direct the singing of Christmas carols in one of the auditoriums in the city. This event will also be broadcast.

Urge Christmas Carol Singing.

"It would not be a bad idea for you folks to all come back here to the tabernacle next Sunday afternoon and have arrangements here for listening in on the Christmas carol service in Buffalo," said Rodeheaver. "And better still it would be if you would arrange to sing these carols with this fine choir you have here and let us in on you."

"The spirit of Christmas will be emphasized if you return to this fine habit of singing carols each year. I hope you do so and that you in addition go about the city homes where persons are shut in that they also might be benefited by your singing."

When Mr. Sunday asked in the evening for persons who had been in the 1912 campaign here to hold up their hands more than half of the audience did so.

Mr. Sunday was eager to preach the sermon that he had arranged, for men at 1:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Voted down by the big crowd so that he might husband his strength for the afternoon and evening meetings he surprised the afternoon audience by preaching it any way. He admitted that it was a good one. And it was brimming with epigrams that, though pertinent with truth, were freighted also with rich humor.

Mrs. Sunday Speaks.

He announced that the W. C. T. U. meeting in the First Methodist church on Thursday evening, would discuss World Peace and World Prohibition.

Mr. Rodeheaver sang also "Dear Little Baby" and the entire congregation "Faith of Our Fathers."

In the afternoon Mr. Rodeheaver sang "Memories." The choir contributed numerous numbers. At all of the services Mr. Rodeheaver utilized also his trombone, "The Holy City" being one of the numbers given.

On Saturday night the audience applauded generously a trio composed of George and Raymond Evans and their sister, Twill Evans, the children of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Evans, of Chester, W. Va. Their offering was "Sweeter Than Before." Rodeheaver recited "Me and Papa and Mother" by Strickland and Gilliland. The business announcement was made by the Rev. Ray M. Davis, of Chester

How to Escape FLU

Avoid so far as possible the places where flu germs are most apt to be; crowded cars; public meeting places; warm, stuffy rooms.

2 Be careful of close contact with others and beware of all coughers and sneezers; breathe through the nose.

3 Get lots of rest. Eat plenty of citrus fruits. Keep the bowels open. Take every precaution to keep in good physical condition, so your system will have high resistance against germs.

4 Above all, avoid catching cold. Any cold may be the forerunner of flu. Take Bayer Aspirin at the first sign of a cold and you can ward it off. Gargle with Bayer Aspirin at first sign of sore throat as this will remove the infection.

5 If you have any reason to suspect even a touch of flu, call your doctor.

BANKERS TRAIL CHECK ARTIST

Merchants Warned
About One "W.
E. Nelson."

Local bankers and merchants have been asked by the Ohio Bankers' Association to be on the lookout for W. E. Nelson, alias H. C. Miller, who is alleged to have been issuing fraudulent checks through the state for the last two years.

The checks presented by Nelson were drawn for either $34.85 or $27.85. He makes small purchases at stores then tenders the check in payment receiving considerable cash. Complaints concerning Nelson have come from nearly every county in the state.

He is described as 40 years of age, dark complexion, about 160 pounds, medium height and usually dresses as a workingman in khaki and sheepskin coat.

Merchants are advised to cash no checks for strangers during the holiday season until they make inquiries at the banks.

REO ANNOUNCES "MATE" 'MODEL

Smaller Edition of "Flying Cloud" on Market.

The Reo Motor company has announced a new model of the Reo Flying Cloud, to be known as "Reo Flying Cloud—The Mate." It is in general a smaller edition of "Reo Flying Cloud—The Master," which was introduced two years ago.

The outstanding feature of "The Mate" are speed, the high efficiency of its braking system, its general appearance and the attractive color combinations in its paint work and upholstery. The use with safety of the full speed and power of this new model is made possible by four-wheel internal expanding hydraulic brakes of an unusually efficient design.

"The Mate" appears in sport and standard models of a five passenger sedan and two passenger coupe, the latter being offered either with rumble seat or rear baggage compartment.

In the design of the body of the new "Flying Cloud—The Mate," three major considerations were kept in mind, appearance, comfort and structural strength. Months of study and design work were devoted to the problem of creating a body whose appearance combined both beauty and originality.

SUNDAY'S MORNING AND AFTERNOON SERMONS

"And His name shall be called wonderful," Isaiah's prophecy concerning Jesus Christ, formed the text of Billy Sunday's sermon yesterday morning as He unqualifiedly pronounced Jesus as the Son of God. "How do I know?" he asked. "How do you know that you are your mother's son? Can you prove the fact except on the testimony of someone who happened to be present on the occasion of your birth? You believe the statement made you by someone else. Subsequent relationships have substantiated it. So I believe that Christ was the Son of God. I have been told so by persons who were told so. And the late relationship has bulwarked the truth."

"Adam and Eve were brought into the world without the congress of man and woman. If they could be created as they were has not God the power to bring one into the world with but a single parent as Jesus was?"

"There are 256 different statements regarding the name of Jesus. He was preeminent in His character and life. Of Him 800 years before He was born, Isaiah declared: 'He was wonderful.' He had at once the nature of God and of man; He was the King of Kings. 'Jesus came to the world to bless not to curse, to give rest to the weary; to pray not to blaspheme. It might have been condonation for Him to have been born in a mansion yet He was given birth in a manger amid the odor of cattle. There was no room in the inn for Him yet upon His arrival angels came and sang."

Greatest Character in History.

"He, the greatest character in all history, came from such worldly obscurity. He can not be accounted for except on the ground of His deity."

"None ever has given stories such as he. To this day teachers of pedagogy are attempting to follow Him. These stories alone proclaim Him divine."

"On His own affirmation He must be believed even for no other reason than the works which He performed. And this is true of every Christian. Note the Zellers, the Schreibers and the Westblakes by their changed lives."

"You do not have to explain the sun, Spring and vegetation do that. You do not have to explain the devil, for drunkenness, lechousness and evil indicate him; you explain God by the presence of regenerated souls, the restraining from wrong. The spot most like heaven on the earth is where Jesus Christ is believed to be the Son of God."

"Jesus came to the world to bless

Son of God can not qualify as a scholar no matter what His mental attainments may be. What I believe about Christ will take me to heaven; what these so-called nuns who deny His divinity affect to believe will take them to hell."

"In all ages there has been but one supremely great genius and He was Jesus Christ. All others of the world's greatest sink into insignificance in comparison with Him. The faith of the evangelical churches rest upon Him. A look, a smile, a touch transformed those to whom it was given and gave physical healing when needed."

"You do not need 10 minutes to be saved. Simply believe in Jesus Christ as your Saviour. Accept him for what He really is. Yield to do His will and your faith in Him will grow, your life radiate his personality and His mystery will gradually unfold in an experience that is more adventure than any possible in this world."

Afternoon Discourse.

"Preaching the sermon that he had intended delivering to men only Mr. Sunday held with profound interest an audience that filled the tabernacle in the afternoon. His text was from I Kings 2:2, 'Be strong and show thyself a man.'

"Manhood was God's ideal everywhere in the Bible, he said. His discourse was brimming over with pertinent advice couched in appealing, humorous, but scriptural form."

"During his discussion of that marking for spiritual strength which made for character and which in turn made for the strong man he inserted the affirmation that had come to him averring that $25,000 had been taken in by bootleggers since he came to East Liverpool."

"And I am told further," he went on, "that $15,000 changed hands in gambling here in that interim. Indeed one person told Miss Kinney that he was trying to break away from the gang, but they had threatened him. What are we going to do with such a dirty bunch?" he shouted. "If they ever get control there will be no mercy shown by them for they give none. Neither should we be merciful to such."

Mrs. Joseph Hughes, on behalf of the campaign executive committee, spoke in a kindred vein at the outset of the sermon when she declared that though East Liverpool was the smallest place in which she and Major Hughes had ever been stationed she regarded it as the most wicked city of her knowledge. "It is an unbelieving place," she said, "and sin is rampant among the youth."

"She spoke of the good done by the revival. 'Conviction is sweeping through our schools,' she declared. 'The work done in this revival has brought such a condition about. And what a revival this world would have been had all of the people in the churches fully co-operated.' As it was there were times that I could scarcely restrain myself from shouting." She had having seen and heard Mr. Sunday in one service in Plainfield, N. J., and in Akron, Ohio. "And this revival has been a blessing to the schools and the churches," she continued. "Whoever has not received a blessing has something wrong with him."

Rodeheaver Greets School Pupils.

"Though convalescing from his indisposition, Billy Sunday was not present at the afternoon meeting on Saturday afternoon. Mrs. Sunday came to the tabernacle for a brief period and explained that as a matter of precaution he would not speak until evening. She was heartened by many holding up their hands to indicate that they had not expected him to be present but were in attendance anyway.

She said that she would carry the information back to him, knowing that the fact would give him comfort. Notwithstanding the evangelist's absence a fine service was had with Homer Rodeheaver leading and greeting contingents of pupils from the Horace Mann and the Garfield schools, many of whom had not been present on Friday night. They sang "You Can Smile" and two boys of their number came to the platform and sang the same number alone to the edification of the hearers who cheered them lustily.

Alfred Peterson, advance man of the evangelistic party, spoke glowingly of the Christian life and his joy in the work of attempting to transform as many human souls as it is possible for him to do.

He gave a realistic description of his own conversion in the Ottumwa, Iowa, meeting which Billy Sunday held in 1908. Then he related experiences of men whom he had aided into the life and alluded to meetings that he had held in conjunction with his own sister.

"I never get a letter from my dad," he said but what he has a reference to prayer and something to say about Jesus.

He drew tears from many eyes in recalling days on the old farm and the family altar there maintained. He told of his grandmother who died three years ago and how she was looking forward "to being soon with Jesus." He said: "I would rather be a personal worker for Christ than anything I know."

How he had been impressed by the sermons of D. L. Moody was also noted by him. "I was deeply affected by that of his on the theme 'God is Love,' he confided.

Rodeheaver Urges Family Altar.

His own conversion followed the initial hearing of Mr. Sunday's sermon on "The Christ of Gethsemane." Of his decision to follow Christ there after he declared: "In my passage through life I want it to be guide post to others and not a stumbling block." He averred it was not too late even in this campaign to bring others to Christ. "The greatest thrill that comes to the human soul is that of knowing that you, knowing Him yourself, have brought some soul to the feet of the Master."

He concluded with the recitation of a poem in which the compelling thought is "None of self and all of thee." He emphasized that with the emptying of self from the soul one can be in an attitude by which he can be mightily used in the service of God.

At the conclusion of Peterson's ad dress, Homer Rodeheaver directed the attention of the audience to the need of a reestablishment of the family altar in homes and the return to the habit of asking blessings before eating.

To conclude the meeting, Rodeheaver taught the audience a blessing in song:

"Accept our gratitude, Lord.

For all the blessings thou dost give.

And guide our daily tasks.

And teach us how to live."

This is the Bethany blessing which 22,000 girls throughout the country use. They meet annually in Winona Lake, Ind. It can be used by everyone.

The invocation was made by the Rev. A. H. O'Brien, pastor of the First Baptist church.

Saturday Night Sermon.

The Twenty-third Psalm was chosen as a subject by Mr. Sunday on Saturday night when, following a day off, he returned to his arduous duties.

He declared that it was held to be a creed psalm, a minstrel one and the psalms were written, he said, as songs persons. David he held had passed through all things therefore could as "the sweet singer of Israel" sympathize with every one. Many of his psalms were written, he said, as songs to be sung in the temple.

He urged that it was good thing to take an inventory at intervals to see how much one really did know of Jesus Christ.

For people to live in towns in which there were churches and yet not attend them—he regarded as stark ingratitude. He said none would want to live in a community without churches. Therefore, they should be aided in their maintenance, he declared.

Heaven, he said, was not a state or condition but a place for the resurrected bodies of believers.

"If I could but lift the curtain of heaven and exhibit to you its glories the devil would not have a friend in 10 minutes," he observed. "God has promised heaven to you by means of salvation. And salvation comes only to those accepting His Son, Jesus Christ, by faith."

COLDS MAY DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe

He averred it was not too late even in this campaign to bring others to Christ. "The greatest thrill that comes to the human soul is that of knowing that you, knowing Him yourself, have brought some soul to the feet of the Master."

He concluded with the recitation of a poem in which the compelling thought is "None of self and all of thee." He emphasized that with the emptying of self from the soul one can be in an attitude by which he can be mightily used in the service of God.

Simplicity of design means better PERFORMANCE

"MAKE it better—make it simpler" has always been the keynote of Ford engineering and manufacturing methods. This policy has been carried forward to its highest, fullest expression in the new Ford.

You see evidence of a carefully planned simplicity of design the instant you lift the hood. Its value becomes increasingly apparent when you drive the new Ford.

Smoothness, quick acceleration, remarkable hill-climbing ability, speed of 55 to 65 miles an hour—all these are brought to you in the new Ford without sacrificing economy and reliability. The whole tendency is to give you the most performance with the least machinery.

This applies not only to the engine but to every detail of the electrical, ignition, cooling, lubrication and fuel systems. The engine itself is but one part of a motor car.

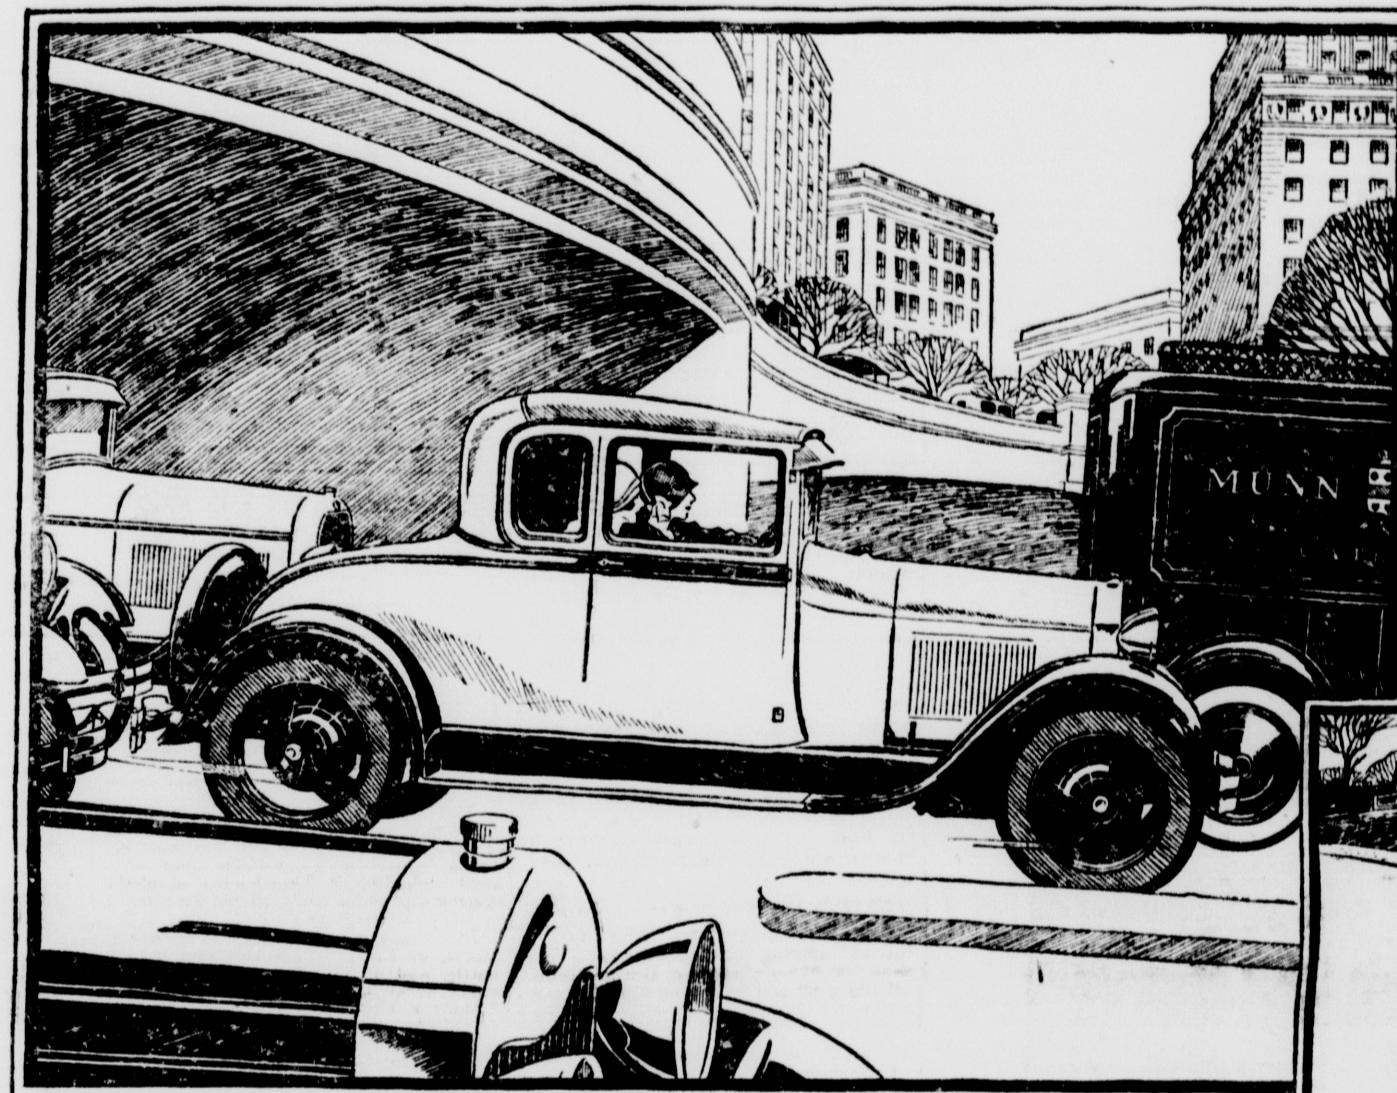

An example of Ford simplicity of design

Take the engine lubrication system. It is a combination of pump, splash and gravity feed and is unusually reliable and effective. There is but one movable part—the pump.

FEATURES OF THE NEW FORD CAR

- Beautiful low lines
- Choice of colors
- Remarkable acceleration
- Smoothness at all speeds
- 55 to 65 miles an hour
- Silent, mechanical internal-expanding six-brake system, with all braking surfaces fully enclosed
- Houdaille hydraulic shock absorbers
- Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield
- Reliability and economy

Prices of the new Ford—Roadster, $450; Phaeton, $460; Tudor Sedan, $495; Business Coupe, $495; Coupe, $550; Sport Coupe, with rumble seat, $550; Fordor Sedan, $625. (All prices F. O. B. Detroit.)

From valve chamber down, the entire flow of oil is as simple in principle as water running downhill. Ford design and Ford manufacturing methods have made it trouble-free. The only thing for you to do is to see that the oil level never falls below low (L).

Only one high-tension cable in ignition system

This same trouble-saving simplicity of design is shown also in the Ford ignition system, which reflects much that is new in mechanical design.

A particularly unique feature is the elimination of high-tension cables from the distributor to the spark-plugs, these connections being made by means of thin bronze springs. There is but one high-tension cable and this connects the coil on the dash with the distributor.

The distributor head itself is water-proof and has been specially designed to prevent short circuits from rain, snow, etc.

Another exclusive Ford development is shown in the construction of the housing of the steering gear mechanism. This is made of three steel forgings, electrically welded together.

The housing is then electrically welded to the steering column, thus making a one-piece steel unit.

Many other vital parts of the new Ford are also electrically welded, permitting the use of steel forgings instead of stampings or castings and giving greater simplicity and strength than if several parts were riveted or bolted together.

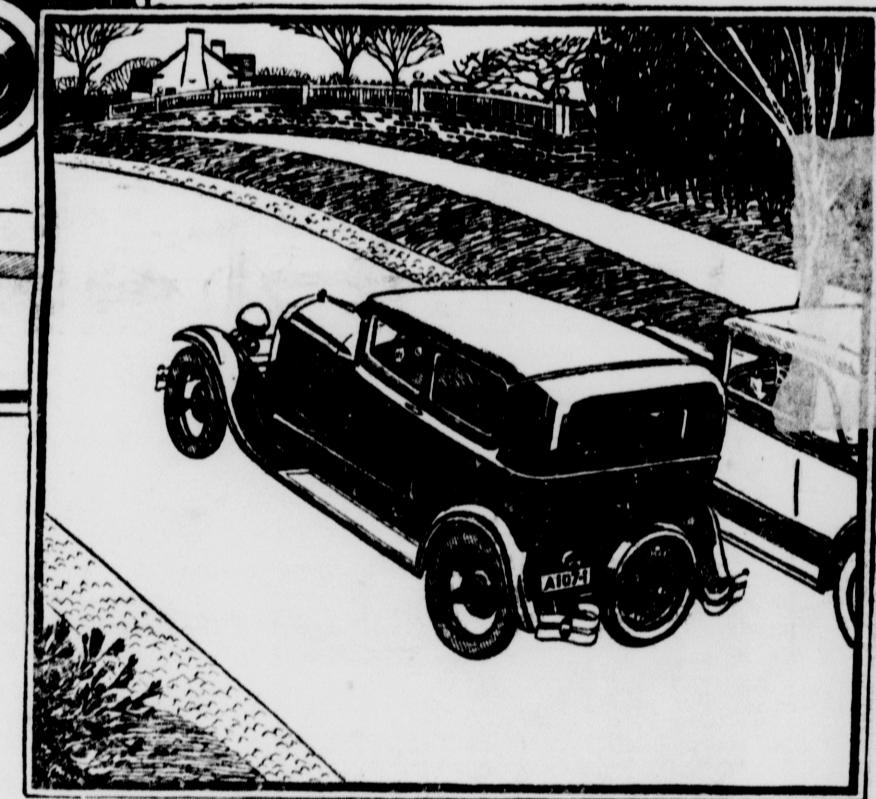

More steel forgings, in fact, are used in the new Ford than in almost any other car, regardless of price.

All six brakes are silent and fully enclosed

Equally important to good performance is the design of the brakes on the new Ford. The six-brake system is unusually safe, reliable and effective because both the four-wheel service brakes and the separate emergency or parking brakes are of the mechanical, internal-expanding type, with all braking surfaces fully enclosed for protection against water, sand, dirt and grease.

For many years this has been recognized as the ideal combination. It is now brought to you on the new Ford because a simple, easy way has been found to accommodate two sets of full internal brakes in a two-in-one brake drum of great strength on the rear wheels.

A further improvement is effected by the self-centering feature of the four-wheel brakes—an exclusive Ford development. Through this construction, the entire surface of the shoe is brought in contact with the drum the instant you press your foot on the brake pedal. This prevents screeching and howling and makes the Ford brakes unusually silent.

Such simplicity of design is not easy to achieve. Yet it is the first essential of good performance in a low-priced car.

It is made possible only through Ford manufacturing and production methods and the experience gained in making more than fifteen million automobiles.

Back of the new Ford is a larger purpose than the making or selling of a motor car. It is to bring the benefits of modern, economical transportation to all the people and to help every motorist get the greatest possible use from his car over the longest period of time at a minimum of trouble and expense. That is the reason for the value that has been put into the new Ford. That is the reason for its outstanding performance.

Bears Scout Tornado And Then Revise Their Practice Plans

Georgia Combine No Breeze

Five-day Drill Schedule is Changed to Ten.

BURKELEY, Cal., Dec. 17.—If the Golden Bears of California ever had the idea that the Golden Tornado of Georgia Tech was a mild southern breeze it was dispelled here today by "Brick" Mitchell, who has returned from scouting the Georgia Tech game.

Although Georgia Tech was reported under wraps when it played its state rivals, Mitchell evidently saw enough to convince himself that the Bears would have an exceedingly busy afternoon on New Year's day at Pasadena.

After Coach Price conferred with Mitchell, the program for the Bears underwent a sudden change. It was originally intended to have the Bears practice only five days before the game. Now, however, the California athletes will be given ten days of intensive workouts before the clash.

Because of the victories of Oregon State and Stanford in the east, Price is faced with the problem of forcing his young men to realize that the west is not infallible and can ride to a fall the same as any of them.

Both California and George Tech will work out in the Pasadena Rose bowl. One team will do its practicing in the mornings and the other in the afternoons.

Chicago World Cue Center as Stars Clash

Eight Foremost Players in Championship Matches.

CHICAGO, Dec. 17.—Chicago becomes the center of the cue world today as eight of the foremost billiard players in the country go to the post in the National Billiard Association's first world championship meet.

The largest purse ever offered in a cue tournament—$28,000—will be at stake.

The event will be formally launched this afternoon at Orchestra hall when Frank Taberski of Schenectady, N. Y., crosses cues with Erwin Rudolph of Chicago, in the first pocket billiards match.

An hour later the three-cushion heat of the tournament will get under way with a match between Willie Hoppe, the multi-champion, and Otto Reisert, former three-cushion title holder.

In tonight's matches, Ralph Greenleaf, national champion, and Pasquale Natalie will perform in the pocket billiards division, while John Layton, national three-cushion champion, and Gus Cupulos of Detroit will clash in the second three-cushion event.

Winners of the tourney, which will continue for three days, will be recognized world champions. Unlike in former years, they will not be subject to challenge. The four players in each division qualified for the rich purses by finishing in the first four places in the national championships held last winter.

Nat Star Outbats Manush

"Goose" Goslin is Junior Loop Leader by One Point.

Batting in the American League throughout the season of 1928 was on a high plane and the records show that fifty men went through with marks of .300 or better, a large majority of them being regulars who were in there in nearly all of the games. From start to finish, the strife for batting honors among the regular performers was chiefly among three men, Leon "Goose" Goslin of Washington, Heinie Manush of St. Louis and Lou Gehrig of New York. This contest went clear up to the last week, when Gehrig fell a few points behind and not until the final day was the winner determined between Goslin and Manush, the former nosing out ahead with a mark of .379. Manush was next to him, only one point behind and Gehrig was third with .374.

Goslin made his record in 135 games a sore arm making it necessary for him to lay off for a time during the season. He piled 173 hits in 456 times at bat and among his wallopers were 36 doubles, ten triples and 17 home runs. The record of Manush was perhaps more impressive because he was in 154 games, making 241 hits in 638 times up and he had 47 doubles, 20 triples and 13 homers. He was tied with Gehrig for the lead in two-baggers the latter also playing 154 games.

Once more Babe Ruth of the Yankees was prominent with the bat, hitting 54 home runs during the season which is only six behind his record of the previous year. He was far ahead of them all in total runs scored having tallied 163 times during the year. Gehrig was next to him with 139 and Combs of New York was third with 118 runs. In runs batted in Ruth and Gehrig wound up with a tie for the honor, having driven in 142. Bob Mensel of the Yanks was next to them with 23 and Harry Rice of Detroit was third with 20.

Batting feats of the season were accomplished by Goslin who hit safely in 25 consecutive games and by Heimies of Detroit who on July 26 in one game, batted in eight runs.

The Yankees took the honors in team batting again but on this occasion were hard pressed by the Athletics. At the finish the Yanks' team average was .296 and the Mackmen's was .295.

Featured Bout Foes Face Job

Unglo and Starr Fight After Edwards-Mitchell go.

JACK UNGLO and Pete Starr, a couple of former welterweights who are now crowding the 150-pound mark, are going to have a tough time winning the plaudits of fans at the Valley A. C. show Thursday night in the Wellsville city hall auditorium.

Unglo and Starr are featured in an eight-round main bout but—they've picked a tough spot right back of Freddy Edwards and Ray Mitchell.

The Mitchell-Edwards six-round grudge shindig will occupy the semi-final position on the card, immediately following the other six-rounders between "Tarzan" Joe Poole of Lawrenceville and Walter Plotz, the "Massillon Wild Man."

So, if Unglo and Starr have any desire to sparkle, they'll have to show something more than the two local rivals and if the latter are as vicious about it as they seem to be, this, for Messrs. Unglo and Starr, will be a difficult assignment.

Not that the main bouters haven't got it. Unglo, the Edina boy, has some good wins under his belt. One, especially, will be of interest to fight followers here. Not so long ago he beat Young Guido at Youngstown and Guido holds two victories over Jimmy Belmont.

Unglo then took on Belmont but that affair never has been settled. In the second round of their fight at Johnstown, Pa., the pair went slashing into the ropes, fell through and out of the ring. Both were injured to such an extent that the bout could not go on.

He has beaten Andy Charlton twice, and has a draw with Teddy Welch. He has also outlasted Denver Leonard, Joe Louder, Allan Beatty, and others, including Lou Kybraski, of Swissvale, to whom he lost a decision recently in the semi-final to the Mayberry Gentle bout at McKeesport.

Starr, termed the "Canton Thunderbolt," is 22 years old and has been fighting only a short time in the professional ranks. He began in the amateurs in 1926 and was rated a good prospect in his division. He developed his hitting power while working in a boiler shop.

To make certain of being barred from writing during June, July and August, all he will have to do is accept the nomination to the Davis cup team in 1929. America became only one of many challenging nations last year and, as a result, its team was selected very early in the season, went into training at Augusta, Ga., visited Mexico City for the first round, played other rounds in Kansas City and Chicago, sailed for abroad, played a final round with the Italians and then was beaten by the French in the challenge round.

Davis cup play means less than a week out of the life of the champion nation; it relieves the challenging nations of a large part of their year. Can you see Tilden forfeiting his writing privilege over a sustained period like that? Maybe, but it's liable to place an awful strain on the eye sight.

Thrilling story of love of two girls for the same man

By HAZEL LIVINGSTON

The boy laughed. "Sure, didn't I tell you? But they're going to have an awful time keeping it quiet. You better not let on I told you, but of course, you'd find it out, here in the office. If you ask me, Winters'll go to jail."

"Winters? You don't mean Allan Winters . . . that Allan Winters stole . . . took . . ."

"He sure did. Mr. Sanderson says it amounts to about forty thousand all told. Maybe they'll give him the chance to pay it back—"

"Forty thousand? Oh nobody could possibly—"

"No, I guess not. I'd send him to all if it was me, but Mr. McEvitt is an awful good-natured slob. They had to about give him the third degree before he'd admit Mr. Winters took it. He looks awful. Say, aren't you going to read your note?"

She tore it open. It might be from Ralph . . .

"Dear Daphne," she read. "Your father wants me to tell you he does not want to see or hear from you, and will you do him the favor of never setting foot in the house. I feel sorry to have to tell you this, but with his health what it is, I would not risk him getting another temper over it, so please take my earnest advice and stay away. If he changes his mind I will be pleased to let you know. I myself wish you only the best. If at any time you could afford to send a little something home it would be appreciated, because I am not equal to all the work now, and you know how he is, he don't want me to get help."

"Many the time I sat up sewing clothes for you, and since you are doing so well in your position, like you said in your letter, I would be glad for anything. Crystal is not able to help yet, poor girl."

"After she and Ralph McEvitt get married I won't have to ask you. He had just proposed to her the day I was in town, so it won't be long now. Be careful who your friends are. I want to advise you like I would my own girl. Don't trust the men, you can't do it, dear, the best of them is untrustworthy. I only hope he makes her a good husband."

Your loving friend and step-mother.

CHAPTER 41.

"I hope I didn't inconvenience you by forgetting the letter," the office boy said anxiously. "He was a very conscientious young man, and it hurt him to think he had failed in a duty. Besides he was upset by Miss Haines' alarming pell-mell. He was afraid that she was going to be ill."

"Oh no!" she answered, fixing him with her great dark eyes, unnaturally large and brilliant in her small white face. "Not at all. I like getting it all at once. All the bad news, you know."

And to his horror and amazement she put her head on the steel filing cabinet beside her, and burst into wild, uncontrollable laughter. "It's so funny—so perfectly crazily funny! First one, and then the other . . . theives and liars, and my own father . . . and my step-mother telling me never to trust any of them!" He couldn't understand more than half she said, she was laughing so, or was she crying?

Several precious minutes were wasted while he darted nervously and fruitlessly through the empty offices, but all the girls had gone home, and he had almost despaired of finding anyone when he discovered little Mr. McMurtrie perched on the top rung of the stepladder in the law library, solemnly consulting the index in a thick calf-skin volume.

Mr. McMurtrie, from the ladder, regarded the panting boy with magnificent disapproval. "The condition of these top shelves is shameful," he said. "Do you ever dust them? Look at my hands? Covered with filth. If you can't be trusted to look after these things, Barney, we'll have to get someone who can. It's shocking. Simply shocking."

There was more of it, along the same lines. Barney writhed unhappily until the lecture was ended, and Mr. McMurtrie, threshed and dusty, descended the ladder with the book in his hand. Then his careful mind turned back to the boy's entrance and he said, still fussing with his pocket handkerchief, "Now what was that you came to tell me?"

Feeling inexplicably foolish Barney stared at him a moment, and then burst out with—"It was Miss Haines—out in the main office. I'm afraid she's sick, and she won't stop laughing—"

"Laughing? Stick?"

"I don't know, but she's—"

"What made her laugh, and why call me because—I told her about a letter a woman left for her, and she read it, and started laughing that way—"

"Hysterical, you mean?"

"Yes, sir. I think so."

"You should have called someone at once!" Mr. McMurtrie said sternly. "It might be serious!"

But when he reached the main office, prepared to administer first aid to a pretty girl who had undoubtedly received tragic news of some kind, he found her deliberately powdering her nose at the small cabinet mirror inside a closet door. He halted, uncertain how to proceed. She had been crying he could see that, so he advanced and said kindly, "No bad news, I hope, Miss Haines?"

He had to repeat it before she understood, and then she just nodded, and said in a harsh scratchy voice that chilled all his sympathy. "Yes, but I'll get used to it," and didn't even look at him. It made Mr. McMurtrie feel very silly. He never liked the girl after that.

But Daphne hardly noticed who had spoken to her. She stood staring at the crumpled note in her hands. Then she straightened it all out again, and re-read it.

"When Crystal and Ralph are married . . ."

The man you love secretly engaged to another girl, making a fool of you all the time! Letting you think he loved you . . . and the man you trusted robbing him . . . and your own father refusing to ever see you again . . .

And you have to go on living, with the world tumbling down around your ears, and all the meaning gone out of it . . .

Some half forgotten words of Flora's . . . "You aren't the first one to fall for the wrong man. You'll get over it . . ."

Her head went up. She'd show 'em . . . Show 'em if she cared!

With fingers that had almost ceased trembling she put her step-mother's letter in her purse, in the inside pocket with her change. The lining was awfully worn . . . funny how linings wear out so soon!

Then she put on her hat, and the tan coat that she had once been so proud of, because Ralph liked it, and went into the street.

Through the glass front of the Empire Cafeteria she could see the long line of patient "regulars" moving inch by inch toward the stacked trays. From chow-chow to ice cream the line wound its steamy, odorous way to the cashier's desk and ice water, and the crowded round tables. A long line than usual, she noticed, and hardly any tables left. That was because she was later than usual, and she wanted to burst out laughing again, remembering why she was late, and what a silly thing it was to be pretending to eat, when you'd rather be dead, and the very thought of food made you sick.

But she ate her dinner, or some of it at least, and if she was ill, and her eyes were red on the street car coming home, nobody seemed to notice.

"Thank fortune for small favors," Crystal sighed when her mother was safely packed into the San Jose bus, and her fluttering handbag was lost in the outbound traffic. And then, lest Ralph, who had driven them to the stage terminal, should find her lacking in daughterly affection, she added, "It's a load off my mind to have her going back home, because she isn't herself here in town. She just hates it. Ralph, I don't think she'd ever be happy away from that ranch. And besides—we don't understand each other."

"I know," he said sympathetically. "It's been hard for you, dear."

And that was the best she could get out of him, even after they were back in the dimly lit studio apartment, with the shades drawn, and the lamps lit, and her curly head on his shoulders.

"I'm so lonely," she sighed. "So sick of the same old thing. I get so discouraged. Nobody seems to care whether I fail, or succeed or what!"

John Boles and Mary Astor in the Fox Picture
"ROMANCE OF THE UNDERWORLD"

At the Ceramic theatre three days, starting today.

MARY ASTOR HIT
IN CROOK STORY

Troubles and grief that beset one who has traveled the primrose path have been emphasized many times in song, story and on the screen, but few times in a more vivid way than is emphasized in "Romance of the Underworld," Fox Film, which opened at the Ceramic today for an engagement of three days.

"Romance of the Underworld" as a stage play was a nation-wide success some years ago. Its theme has been adhered to, but the plot has been brought up to the minute without lessening its thread of story.

Briefly told, it deals with a beautiful girl who through adversity is forced to earn a living as an entertainer in a speakeasy. She is in the toils of a notorious thief and despoiler who calls himself "her man" and collects her earnings.

The girl tires of it all and seeks to escape, both from his clutches and from the life she is leading. She gets work in a laundry only to have him follow. Eventually she becomes a waitress in a restaurant, studying at night, then a secretary.

Later she marries her employer and is a happy wife and mother when "Derby Dan," just released from prison, threatens to tell her husband of her past.

Desperate, the girl seeks the aid of a detective who had befriended her in the old days and who knows she is straight. How he solves the problem forms a sensational climax.

Mary Astor surpasses her excellent work in "Dressed to Kill." Ben Bard as "Derby Dan" is immense and Robert Elliott, who made stage history by his portrayal of the detective in "Broadway," gives a marvelously human portrayal of "Ed Burke."

Oscar Apfel, Helen Lynch and other popular scintillants all deserve high praise for their work.

"ROSE-MARIE"
WINS PLAUDITS

"Rose-Marie," which opened today at the American theater, means fully as much to the screen as the famous play from which it was adapted meant to the stage.

In other words, the charm of Arthur Hammerstein's stage presentation, by Otto A. Harbach and Oscar Hammerstein III, has lost none of its original charm in its transition to the screen.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer apparently set out to outdo its own good work of several seasons back when that organization adapted and filmed Lehar's "The Merry Widow."

"Rose-Marie" has been every bit as carefully handled as was the former vehicle. Though all of the marvelous and elegant society backgrounds of "The Merry Widow" are missing from M-G-M's new play, these are made up by the grandeur of the scenic backgrounds in the French Canadian north woods story.

Joan Crawford and James Murray are seen in the featured romantic roles and each is ideally suited to the role. Miss Crawford has oft proved her ability on the screen in other productions but she clinches the matter with the manner in which she has portrayed the role of the daughter of the post. Murray, almost unknown on the screen, proves to be a real screen find which we hope producers will not carelessly lose in the shuffle when future pictures are cast.

The supporting players are among the best ever gathered for a single cast and include such film notables as Hause Peters, Gibon Gowland, Polly Moran, Creighton Hale, Gertrude Astor, Lionel Belmore, William Orlat, John Barrow, Marjorie Anglemeyer, Helen Brant.

BILLY SUNDAY HITTING TARGET

Genesis has 23 chapters which cover 2,300 years of the world's history.

God devoted 25 chapters to the discussion of Abraham, yet He told the story of the creation in 800 words.

Most men believe in heredity until their sons make fools of themselves, then they deny such a belief.

When a man says that his word is as good as his bond make him sign the bond.

We are all equal when we are asleep; if tombstones told the truth then hell would have no inhabitants.

A husband should tell his wife everything before she finds it out herself.

Many a man has been wrecked by a permanent wave.

The worst bankrupt is he who is bankrupt in character.

God loves to see a man grow and glow.

Unique Method Doctors Advise for Home Use Gives Almost Instant Relief

Glad that she took her doctor's advice instead of allowing neglect to make her feel more miserable, Mrs. Albert H. Haines now realizes how quickly one can get rid of a cold. For doctors are now advising home use of a pleasant hospital method that has brought surprising quick relief to numbers of people in East Liverpool Wellsville and vicinity.

Mrs. Haines had neglected her cold three days in the hope it would "cure itself." Instead, congestion started spreading so that she called the doctor, who advised double strength doses of Ayer's Pectoral. Relief began almost instantly, he reports. In another hour or so the medication of
